Principles for a skills strategy

1. We welcome views on these principles and whether there are others we should consider.

2. How can we further simplify the skills system, including the number, roles and responsibilities of the many organisations working in the system?

3. In view of the current fiscal deficit, what areas of public investment in skills could be reduced and where could private investment be increased? What are the main constraints on changing the balance between public and private investment and how could these be overcome?

A respected and credible training offer

4. How could the Apprenticeship programme be improved? What can be done to increase the proportion of apprentices progressing to Level 3 and beyond? What and how should employers contribute to Apprenticeships?

5. We welcome views on how best to support people who might in time benefit from an Apprenticeship but who do not currently have the skills to begin one.

6. We welcome views about progression from Level 3 Apprenticeships into higher education, including whether there is demand for Higher Apprenticeships at Levels 4 and 5.

7. How should we ensure that training leads to real gains in skills, knowledge and competence and not just the accreditation of existing skills?

8. How can we incentivise colleges and training organisations to offer a flexible and cost-effective 'needs-led' offer for people who are out of work or at risk of becoming unemployed?

9. How can we encourage colleges and training organisations to make the transition from learning to work as smooth as possible, enabling progression in the workplace, as well as to further learning?

10. How can we better promote enterprise education in further education colleges and throughout the training system?

Funding and entitlements

11. Should Government continue with an entitlements based approach? How can we ensure that Government money is targeted where it is needed most and where it will achieve most value?

Helping individuals and employers choose the learning they want

12. How can the learning market be made to work more efficiently, effectively and economically and to be more responsive and accountable to demand by individuals and employers, while also delivering value for money?

13. We welcome views on how best to ensure employers are able to shape the skills system to meet their needs.

14. We are interested in views on what more might be needed to make the system responsive to employer needs.

15. Which qualifications have most value for employers and learners? Which do not have value? How do we evolve the Qualifications and Credit Framework so that it focuses on the former and removes the latter?

16. How can we improve the accessibility and quality of careers information, advice and guidance services for adults?

17. We welcome views on the vision for lifelong learning accounts, and their potential usefulness.

18. We welcome views on approaches to informing learners and employers including how better information can be made available while reducing bureaucracy.

Giving colleges and training organisations the freedom to respond

19. We welcome views on our planned measures for simplification and freeing colleges and training organisations.

20. How can we enable colleges and training organisations to be more efficient and responsive to the needs of employers, learners and their community but without adding new layers of control by local bodies?

21. What mechanisms could we use to hold colleges and other training organisations to account for their performance in responding to employers' needs and for prioritising training that adds real economic value?

Incentives to train in priority areas

22. Do we need a framework that will enable and encourage employers and individuals to invest in training in priority areas and for colleges and other training organisations to provide appropriate courses?

23. Should we promote training innovation, particularly in rapidly changing or wholly new areas of the economy? If so, how might we do this?

24. How can we ensure employers can access high quality labour market information?

Encouraging a more productive workforce

25. What would enable businesses to use skills as a driver of productivity and business improvement?

26. We welcome views on ways in which businesses can be encouraged to increase the UK's leadership and management capability to create better run and more highly performing businesses.

Reinvigorating adult and community learning

27. How could we encourage the development of productive partnerships with third sector organisations?

28. We welcome views on new ways that colleges could be used to support the community.

29. How could adult and community learning be reinvigorated? We especially welcome ideas for how businesses and others could be encouraged to engage in supporting local community learning to help create local ownership and momentum.

Measuring success

30. We welcome views on those indicators of success would be most useful to you or your organisation.
